

March 10, 1992

Calmoseptine, Inc.

Huntington Beach, Ca. 92649

Dear Wendy;

I am sorry this letter is so late in arriving after our conversation on the phone, I enjoyed talking to you finally after so long in trying to locate you. I did want to once again thank you for the information about Calmoseptine.

I have never been so pleased with a new product in my years practicing as a PA-C. I continue to be very suprised and impressed with Calmoseptines uses and effectiveness.

I am by nature quite skeptical at trying new products especially since a good number of the patients I follow are elderly residents of skilled nursing homes whose reactions to new treatments and medicines are numerous. However, I have also found that these people, due to their compromised conditions, are prone to skin problems which are often refractory to aggressive medical management.

After one such patient had totally exaperated me in attempting to clear his reddened buttocks from chronic bowel and bladder incontinence, I tried Calmoseptine. I met with resistance from the staff nurse who has been practicing for many, many years. She told me in a very condesending tone that all the products we had tried have literature that claim cure and was doubtful that Calmoseptine would provide any more response that the other remedies we had tried.

The nurse called me back a few days later and was raving about the effectiveness of Calmoseptine. Now she routinely asks for treatment orders with Calmoseptine on a good number of the residents of her facility.

Other nurses have been just as impressed with Calmoseptines effectiveness and I find that they are asking other doctors for treatment orders with Calmoseptine.