Dear Sirs:

In 1986 I had a "Pull Through" operation in which my colon was removed. I am very thankful for this operation which saved my life, but ever since it I have had a very sensitive "rear end." I have sometimes broken out in very bad skin irritations. About six months ago, I had a major irritation in my anal area. Parts of the skin were raw. I called Karen Altrescu, an ET in San Francisco, who has always been very helpful to me. She gave me several suggestions and for the ointment to use, she said, "Replace Calmoseptine for anything else you have been using." I go a tube and started using it. It works great. My condition improved and I continue to use Calmoseptine. Recently I had a minor rash, I used Calmoseptine and it cleared up quickly. I would recommend Calmoseptine highly. It is a hard name to learn, but Calmoseptine is a name that is well worth learning and a product that really delivers what it promises.

Sincerely yours.

Gil
